QUEER ALLY PROGRAM
CONTINUING THE JOURNEY

University of California, Merced
Sponsored by
LGBTQ+ Initiatives | Office of Student Life
V. 5.6.19
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Table of Contents

- Continuing the Journey ........................................................................................................... 3
- LGBTQ+ READING LIST .......................................................................................................... 3
- Websites..................................................................................................................................... 6
- Towards Active Allyship ........................................................................................................... Error! Bookmark not defined.
- Do’s and Don’ts for Allies ......................................................................................................... Error! Bookmark not defined.
- Benefits of Being an Ally .......................................................................................................... Error! Bookmark not defined.
- Some Risks of Being an Ally .................................................................................................... Error! Bookmark not defined.
CONTINUING THE JOURNEY

There are endless opportunities to continue to learn more about the gender expansive community. Below are just a few readings and resources you could utilize. Ultimately, you are responsible for your continued learning and the way you support the gender expansive community. The readings on this list have not been vetted nor are they a go to resource. They are simply opportunities to further your understanding and knowledge about the LGBTQ+ community and Allyship in general. There are many other readings out there that may be more pertinent, impactful or inclusive. This is simply a jumping off point. Feel free to utilize the below resources in ways that are most useful to you.

LGBTQ+ READING LIST

Allyship:

Privilege:

Introduction to Queer Studies:

LGBTQ+ Identity Development:

Performativity:

Trans*:

Intersectionality w/Race & Sexuality:

Intersex:

Asexual:

Ability:

Aging

Violence:

Same Sex Violence:

Health & Queerness:

Religion & Homosexuality:

Queerness, State & Activism:

WEBITES
LGBTQ Allyship at http://allyship.org/
Gender Spectrum, https://www.genderspectrum.org/
National Center for Transgender Equality, https://transequity.org/
National LGBTQ+ Task Force, https://www.thetaskforce.org/
Straight for Equality, https://www.straightforequality.org/
The Trevor Project, [https://www.thetrevorproject.org/#sm.000001br4ldxf51dzrd0j0rs25 or 1-866-488-7386](https://www.thetrevorproject.org/#sm.000001br4ldxf51dzrd0j0rs25 or 1-866-488-7386)
Transgender Law Center, https://transgenderlawcenter.org/
Social Justice Advocacy
The belief that individual and collective actions are necessary to fight injustices that lead toward improving conditions for the benefit of everyone. Social Justice Advocacy has been generally used to refer to activities that promote change that addresses social inequities and institutional changes that impact the lives and psychological well-being of people. (Chung, R., and Bemak, F. 2012. Social justice counseling. Sage Publications)

Qualities of an Ally:
1. Recognizes one’s own privilege as a member of the dominant group.
2. Has worked to develop an understanding of a target group and the needs of this group.
3. Chooses to align with the target group and respond to their needs.
4. Believes that it is in one’s self-interest of being an ally.
5. Is committed to personal growth (in spite of the possible discomfort or pain) required to promote social change.
6. Expects support from other allies.
7. Is able to acknowledge and articulate, without guilt or apology, how oppressive patterns operate.
8. Expects to make mistakes, but does not use it as an excuse for inaction.
9. Knows that one has a clear responsibility to fight oppression whether or not persons in the targeted group chose to respond.
10. Assumes that people in a targeted group are already communicating in the best and most comfortable way.
11. Does not expect members of the targeted group to educate them.
12. Assumes that the target group consists of survivors (not victims) and that they have a long history of resistance.
13. Does not attempt to convince target group that one is on their side. Shows support through actions, not words.
14. Does not expect gratitude from people in the target group and remembers that being an ally is a matter of choice.
15. Creates a comfortable setting. Is conscious of concepts such as cultural imperialism and cultural appropriation.
16. Confronts oppressive jokes, slurs, and actions. Knows that silence may communicate condoning of an oppressive statement.

Building Cultural Dexterity: Towards Active Allyship

Commitment to action comes from the recognition that only through participation in movements for social change can we achieve the goal of liberating ourselves from cycles of oppression.

From Privilege to Allyship:
An ally is a member of the “dominant” or “majority” group who supports members of community/ies to which they do not personally belong to, by interrupting injustice, questioning or rejecting the dominant ideology, and working against oppression through support of, and as an advocate, with or for, the oppressed population.

Individual allyship involves developing the skills to interrupt prejudiced remarks or behavior, understanding that only through participation in movements for social change can we achieve the goal of liberating ourselves from cycles of oppression. The impact and affect to us, both individually and collectively, can be negative as well as painful. Recognizing privilege and learning how to be an ally is the first-step towards interrupting oppressive cycles. The following are an effective means to becoming an ally:

Awareness
Living with awareness implies developing a critical consciousness of the world around us. It involves developing the ability to notice and pay attention to various aspects of our daily lives, including our language, behavior, and thoughts. Self-examination of one’s privilege is critical.

Analysis
This requires understanding of what is going on in the world around us, but also having the ability to think critically about it. Developing the capacity to determine what needs to be in a given situation is required.

Education
We must educate ourselves about the histories and experiences of target groups within the context of the society, which we inhabit. This includes educating ourselves about the culture and norms of target groups, and learning about how laws, policies, and practices may adversely affect, or be used to disadvantage target groups.

Interrupting Behavior
We must develop the skills to interrupt prejudiced remarks or actions by communicating our knowledge and analyses of given issues and situations, and to initiate awareness-raising.

Taking Action
Commitment to action comes from the recognition that only through participation in movements for social change can we achieve the goal of liberating ourselves from cycles of oppression. Taking action means deciding what needs to be done, and then making sure that the action is taken.

On the spectrum-of-allies analysis, identify in each wedge different individuals, groups, or institutions on where they stand according to your issue. Moving from left to right, identify:

Active Allies: people who agree with you and are fighting alongside you
Passive Allies: people who agree with you but are not doing anything about it
Neutrals: fence-sitters, the unengaged
Passive Opposition: people who disagree with you but are not trying to stop you
Active Opposition: people who actively oppose your position and are engaged in stopping you

In 1964, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), a major driver of the civil rights movement in the U.S. South, conducted a “spectrum-of-allies style” analysis. They determined that they had a lot of passive allies who were students in the North: these students were sympathetic, but had no entry point into the movement. They didn’t need to be “educated” or convinced, they needed an invitation to enter.

To shift these allies from “passive” to “active,” SNCC sent buses north to bring folks down to participate in the struggle under the banner “Freedom Summer.” Students came in droves, and many were deeply radicalized in the process, witnessing lynching, violent police abuse, and angry white mobs, all simply as a result of black people trying to vote.

Many wrote letters home to their parents, who suddenly had a personal connection to the struggle. This triggered another shift: their families became passive allies, often bringing their workplaces and social networks with them. The students, meanwhile, went back to school in the fall and proceeded to organize their campuses. More shifts. The result: a profound transformation of the political landscape of the U.S. This cascading shift of support, it’s important to emphasize, wasn’t spontaneous; it was part of a deliberate movement strategy that, to this day, carries profound lessons for other movements.

Adapted from Russell, J. 2013. Shifting the spectrum of allies.
DO’S AND DON’TS FOR ALLIES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Do’s</th>
<th>Don’ts</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Do take responsibility for learning more about oppression and how to</td>
<td>Don’t assume that members of marginalized communities are available to or have a responsibility or desire to teach you about oppression.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>be an ally.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do stay open to feedback.</td>
<td>Don’t confuse intention with effect.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>So spend time being self-reflective about your own life.</td>
<td>Don’t expect others to share your self-reflection with you or to be open to processing your new awareness with you.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do explore ways you have benefited from any privilege you may have.</td>
<td>Don’t wallow in guilt about how lucky you are to be a member of a privileged group.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do make a point of reaching out to other allies for support.</td>
<td>Don’t get discouraged if you have periods of feeling isolated.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do be on the lookout for oppressive behaviors, comments, and policies.</td>
<td>Don’t be disturbed if you are not always able to spot them immediately.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do make a commitment to interrupting oppressive comments and behaviors.</td>
<td>Don’t give up if you can’t do it every time.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do recognize and acknowledge when you have an epiphany about oppression.</td>
<td>Don’t be surprised if you don’t experience any epiphanies but take small steps instead.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do be motivated by the small steps you make in understanding yourself and others.</td>
<td>Don’t expect to be congratulated when you realize something new.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do seek collaborative learning environments.</td>
<td>Don’t count on everyone in your life collaborating with you on your journey.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do take a comprehensive approach to learning how to be an ally.</td>
<td>Don’t be disappointed if you sometimes feel confused about your own life or about how oppression operates in institutions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Learning more about yourself is most effective when it is balanced with increasing your understanding of institutions.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do involve yourself in many facets of anti-oppression work in your community. Work in a variety of coalitions, and develop strategies for connecting your commitment to anti-rape work to other forms of anti-oppression work.</td>
<td>Don’t think you have to do it all. Involve others in your life and in your community.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do anti-oppression work for your own well-being.</td>
<td>Don’t forget that change is a process, not an event.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

BENEFITS OF BEING AN ALLY

- You can help make a difference in someone's life.
- You can develop healthy relationships with people from the gay community.
- With the addition of those new friends you learn more about the world around you.
- You create an inclusive community where everyone can live, learn and play feeling safe and valued.
- You make visible an invisible population.
- You are able to support someone when her/his life seems difficult and isolating.
- You will be making a personal contribution to improving the campus climate and the lives of students, faculty, and staff.
- Staff, faculty, and students may be more at ease when sharing issues pertaining to your job.

Adapted from University of Southern Maine's "Queer Ally Program Project" by Gregory M. Weight, Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Community Office, University of Delaware, March 2000

SOME RISKS OF BEING AN ALLY

- Others may speculate about your own sexual orientation. You may be labeled as LGBTQ+ ("by association"). This may be uncomfortable for you.
- You may become the subject of gossip or rumors.
- You may be criticized or ridiculed by others who do not agree with you or who view the issue as unimportant or unpopular.
- You may experience alienation from friends or colleagues who are not comfortable with the topic of sexual orientation. These people may distance themselves from you in order to avoid conflict or labels.
- Your values, your morality, and your personal character may be questioned by people who believe homosexuality is wrong, sinful, against family values, etc.
- You may become the target of overt or subtle discrimination, such as not being appointed to a committee, being excluded from certain activities, or a negative reflection on an evaluation. People who are LGBT may not accept you as an ally. Some may believe that you are really LGBT but are not ready to acknowledge it.
- Due to some past negative experiences with heterosexuals, people who are LGBT may not trust you and may question your motivation.

Information from the Duke University SAFE on Campus Resource Manual